Katie Scott advises and represents a broad range of clients in community care, mental health, and human rights claims. She specialises in welfare, medical treatment and property and affairs disputes in the Court of Protection (where the dispute concerns an incapacitated adult) or the family division (where the dispute concerns a child).

She is currently instructed as one of the junior counsel to the Infected Blood Inquiry and appears regularly at inquests (specialising in deaths that arise in hospitals).

She is an accredited mediator. She mediates a wide range of disputes, with a special focus on disputes in respect of incapacitated adults.

Katie has many years of experience working with vulnerable clients and witnesses and has had vulnerable witness training.

Court of Protection and Medical Treatment

"She is brilliant; she is very good at picking through points of law and cases that involve tricky mental capacity issues, and her written work is very good." "A talented barrister who is sensitive when navigating cases and has a real gift for knowing how to pitch issues. She is an extremely reliable pair of hands." "She's personable, easy to work with and knows her stuff inside out. She's also very practical and reassuring."
Chambers and Partners 2020.

Katie has extensive experience in the Court of Protection and the High Court (when the inherent jurisdiction is invoked) in disputes concerned with the health, welfare, medical treatment and finances of incapacitated adults. She also acts in medical treatment disputes concerning children.

Cases of note
