Civil Liberties and Human Rights

Rory is recommended by The Legal 500 and Chambers and Partners as a leading silk in civil liberties and human rights. He acts for the government in sensitive immigration, asylum and deportation challenges, typically those involving national security matters. He is currently acting in several human rights challenges concerning individuals deprived of British citizenship for travelling to Syria and aligning with terrorist organisations.

Early in his career, Rory worked at the European Court of Human Rights, drafting judgments and decisions in numerous British and Irish cases. He gave lectures on human rights on behalf of the Council of Europe and the Raoul Wallenberg Institute in Strasbourg, Armenia and Azerbaijan. He has also advised in relation to constitutional claims in jurisdictions with constitutions similar to the European Convention on Human Rights, for example the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Cases of note

- Shamima Begum, C8, C10, C11 and D4 v SSHD (SC/163/2019, SC/172/2020, SC/174/2020, SC/175/2020, SC/182/2020) - It was not in the interests of justice to allow appellants, in Camp Roj in Syria, to pursue some grounds of appeal but not others.
- R3 v SSHD (SC/150/2018) - The SSHD was entitled to deprive a dual national of his British citizenship after he travelled to Syria and aligned with an Al-Qaida aligned group, even though some of R3's work in Syria was charitable and he had a British wife and children in the UK.
- L3 v SSHD (SC/144/2017) - The SSHD was entitled to exclude a Libyan national from the UK, even though he had a wife and child in the UK, as he held a leadership position in a Libyan militia group which contained hard-line Islamist elements.
