"Hannah is brilliant at establishing rapport with both instructing solicitors and with clients. She is unflappable, pragmatic and works tirelessly to achieve the best results." Chambers UK Bar Guide, 2023

Hannah specialises in construction and engineering, energy, and professional negligence, as well as general commercial work. She is regularly instructed by domestic and international clients in Technology and Construction Court (TCC) proceedings as well as arbitration and adjudication. Hannah has substantial experience as junior counsel as well as sole counsel of a wide range of construction, engineering and infrastructure disputes, with particular experience of nuclear and energy matters. She works with FIDIC, NEC3 and JCT standard forms and bespoke contracts, and advises employers, construction professionals, local authorities, as well as private individuals.

Hannah speaks fluent French, in addition to German and Italian, which has helped in developing her international practice. In 2019, she was called to the Bar of Ireland (currently non-practising).
