“Utterly, utterly brilliant...” Chambers and Partners 2021

A highly experienced and versatile advocate, Lisa has a broad public law practice, with a particular focus on human rights, asylum, immigration and nationality, and cases involving national security issues. She represents clients before a wide range of courts and tribunals, including the Supreme Court and the European Court of Human Rights, as well as specialist tribunals such as the Investigatory Powers Tribunal and Special Immigration Appeals Commission. Prior to taking silk, Lisa was on the Attorney-General's A Panel of counsel and she continues to provide advice and representation to a range of Government Departments and agencies as well as local authorities and other public bodies. Her private client work ranges from the provision of strategic support to corporations in negotiating business immigration issues to advising and representing families and individuals in judicial review and appeal proceedings. She is ranked as a leading silk in each of her specialist practice areas by both The Legal 500 and Chambers, whose immigration section names her as a “Star Individual”. Lisa was a member of the Independent Human Rights Act Review panel and regularly lectures and contributes to publications in her areas of expertise.
