"An exceptionally dedicated and thorough barrister: you can count on her to leave no stone unturned and to get to the bottom of any problem you may have. She is bright, talented, and extremely committed to her cases. A natural leader, and a real asset to any legal team." The Legal 500 2023 (Tier 3)

Samantha is a highly regarded and in-demand multi-disciplinary barrister who practises in personal injury and clinical negligence, health and safety, construction, commercial, regulatory and disciplinary law and public law. She is recognised in the legal directories for her thoroughness, forensic analysis of the evidence and her personable ability to lead and work as a team. Samantha is regularly led by silks in high-profile, complex matters. She frequently acts as sole counsel. She acts for a range of clients from individual claimants and companies to insurers, government departments, local authorities, and quasi-governmental bodies. She is a strong advocate and tactician, benefitting from extensive court and trial experience. Samantha was appointed to the Treasury Panel of Junior Counsel (C Panel) in 2018.

Before joining the Bar, Samantha achieved a distinction in her LLM from McGill University and, most notably, undertook a Judicial Assistantship at the Constitutional Court of South Africa.

Commercial

Samantha accepts instructions in a broad range of commercial litigation matters. Samantha has particular expertise in fire safety, health and safety, professional negligence, and matters concerning the Building Regulations, the Building Safety Act 2022, the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005, and the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974. Samantha has focused extensively on these issues while instructed as lead junior counsel to The Grenfell Tower Inquiry, having worked closely with experts and on the cross-examination of some of the inquiry's most high-profile witnesses.

Samantha's most recent commercial work includes:

- representing the government in a multi-million-pound commercial arbitration regarding the design and construction of a large regeneration project
- acting as sole counsel in a cross-border mediation in a misselling claim
- advising directors on a range of contractual matters including defending allegations of fraudulent misrepresentation.

Samantha's commercial practice is complemented by her regulatory and costs expertise.
