The collapse of the construction and outsourcing giant Carillion hit the headlines earlier this year. This, coupled with other regular news stories of data breaches and misuse of personal information on a seemingly industrial scale, raise the spectre of systemic issues that have the potential severely to disrupt commercial life. In an era of ever greater inter-connectivity, can financial institutions, companies or infrastructure ever be “Too Big to Fail”? And when things do go wrong, what is the role of insurance?

Join BILA on 2 July for a discussion of the insurance, legal and regulatory issues involved when the “Too Big to Fail”, do fail. Dame Elizabeth Gloster, Lady Justice of Appeal and Sean McGovern, Chief Compliance Officer, Head of Regulatory & Government Affairs, XL Catlin, have kindly agreed to chair the conference.
