As international arbitration cases proliferate and become more complex, interim measures are being increasingly relied upon to protect parties' rights pending the outcome of a dispute. Interim relief in international arbitration now takes various forms, including measures to facilitate production of evidence, preserve the status quo, or enjoin party action such as the dissipation of assets. Young practitioners today must be well versed in the different types of interim relief available, the applicable legal standards, and strategies to effectively pursue or defend against interim relief applications for their clients.

The YSIAC-KCAB Next Seoul Workshop 2019 will delve into key aspects of interim measures in international arbitration with leading experts and young practitioners sharing their insights on techniques, strategies, and latest trends. Join us for a discussion of the practical aspects of interim measures, as well as issues and challenges commonly faced by practitioners, including the circumstances and standards for granting interim measures, when to go to the courts, the use of emergency arbitrators, and how to overcome issues of enforceability.
